

Political Constraints:

- To foreign policy interventions on the affairs of the state and its laws.
- Solid waste management system
- Funding from abroad for most developing country projects.

Human Constraints:

Human constraints are meant to reduce the number of specialists who can manage the development, as many state institutions lack qualified people with a high level of experience in development, which leads to poor management of development. This problem is the result of the lack of institutions to rehabilitate individuals capable of managing Development is correct and required.