An Analytic Study of Economic Merger and Acquisition phenomena with a special Focus on their Banking Sectors

Abstract:

The world is currently witnessing – huge flux of merger and acquisition especially in the banking field. Such a flux occurs in all economic Sectors, and it has its major field is in the united states of America and the European Union.

There are difficult forms of merger and acquisition the most important of which are the horizontal, vertical and aggregative facets

Also, the phenomena of merger and acquisition stem from various factors such as the benefits of economies of Scale and the increase in the profits of stockholders.

In addition, these phenomena have important effects on the economic factors, especially their negative effect unemployment.
